Annual Military Inspection

By Juliet Ferrell

NJROTC had their Annual Military Inspection on Tuesday, 15 November 2011 in the gym. This year was different from years in the past because the Inspection was held during the day. The cadets began getting inspected at 8:45 that morning. The inspector, Captain Eddie Martinez (USNR), was presented and began inspecting the cadets. During the inspection, each platoon showed off their hard work by performing their individual drills.

But these drills were not magically perfect overnight. "The cadets started preparing shortly after school began in August," said Senior Naval Science Instructor, Captain Lewis. "The Annual Military Inspection is THE most important inspection for the cadets." This is because this is a mandatory event as dictated by the US Navy.

After the individual drills were completed, the Unarmed and Armed drill teams marched out and showed how they do things. At the end of the Inspection, Captain Martinez presented the awards and named the Honor Platoon. All in all, these cadets showed how hard work can really pay off.

*"I know we'll do well,"
said the Unit Commanding
Officer, junior Special
Hubbard, a week before the Inspection.*

From Grass to Turf

By Hanna Lewis

Senior and jersey number twelve Stewart Summers was this past season's Pearl High School quarterback.

Summers transferred last year from Madison Ridgeland Academy when MRA got a new coach. Summers said, "[I came here because] I like Coach Perry and I thought we had a good team this year with DJ. DJ had been trying to get me over here, too."

Playing football has always been in Summers' life. He first remembers throwing the football in the front yard with his grandfather when he was a young child. When he joined his first team, his father was his coach.

Summers' college plans also include football. He said he is trying to get a football scholarship; but even if he does not, he may still play walk-on football.

As a child, Summers said he was always outside with his friends either playing sports or a good game of cowboys and Indians. He also remembers tailgating at Ole Miss with his family; watching football games when his hero, Eli Manning, played; and just having a good time.

Summers still likes to have a good time, whether that is playing more sports; hanging out with his family, friends, and girlfriend; or just going to the church youth group.

When asked about younger students who might look up to him, his closing words were "Just make the most of the time you have and enjoy it... just trust in God because it's his plan."

"Just make the most of the time you have."

College Style Art: High School Course

By Hanna Lewis

Pearl High School offers many art classes to its students. These classes range from visual art studios, which is a class that gives an overview of ancient art, all the way to specialized classes for qualified art students.

One specialized art class offered at PHS is the semester-long Drawing Studio. In drawing, advanced art students who have taken lower level arts and meet the specific requirements of the class learn more about drawing. These students also develop their technique based on their individual style and current interest.

Unlike most art classes, drawing is an individual college-style class where the first nine weeks is spent reviewing drawing styles and techniques and also refining their skills. The second nine weeks is a more independent study where the students decide what direction they want to go with their drawing. Mrs. Heather Rumpfelt, who teaches the class, then gives the student advice while they complete their project.

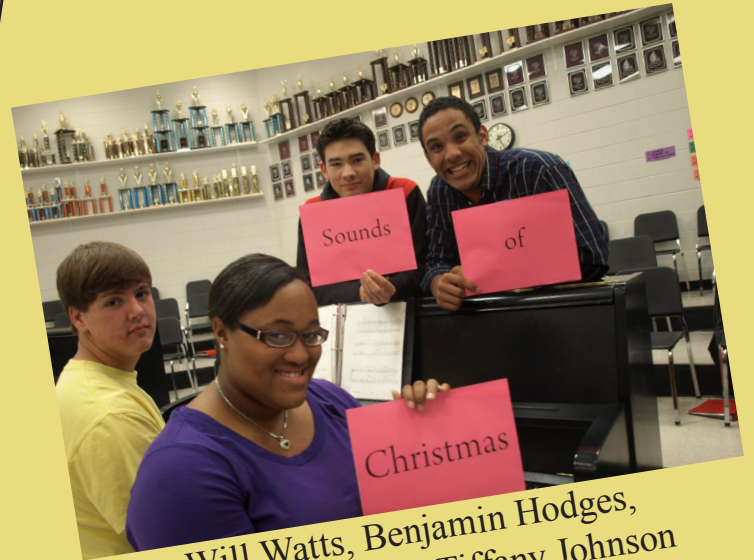

This unique way of teaching the class helps prepare the student for college level art courses. Mrs. Rumpfelt said, "I feel like it is really important the students understand what it is going to be like in college [should they choose to major in art]."

TALK[®] ABOUT IT

ANONYMOUS
HELP

“The benefit of having the AnComm service is that it allows even the most disconnected child to have a voice and thus be able to build a positive connection with an adult at the school. Building positive connections and weaving this web of support is most important to our school counselors and administrators.”

Dr. John G. Ladner
Former Superintendent
Pearl Public School District
Pearl, Mississippi

“The students know they can contact me anonymously. That opens the dialogue. Students write that ‘so and so is picking on me, please stop it.’ Because they know what they say is confidential, they go ahead and say who the bully is. It has helped stop our bullying problem.”

Karen Wilson
Former Principal
Pearl Jr. High School
Pearl School District
Pearl, Mississippi

“We’re seeing that this generation feels very comfortable discussing things in that format [online messaging]... We’re seeing an increase in students using counseling services.”

Gina Morgigno
Counselor
Pearl High School
Pearl, Mississippi

“We haven’t had a lot of large problems, but we were able to stop a potential suicide when we found out about it through the system. You can’t put a price tag on that.”

Ray Morgigno
Former Principal
Pearl High School
Pearl, Mississippi

Incident Type	Number of Incidents	Percentage of Total Incidents Reported
Stress	910	15%
Bullying	588	10%
Depression	452	8%
Peer Pressure	185	3%
Drugs	140	2%
Suicide	107	2%

Ever wonder if anyone truly cares? If anyone out there in this cruel world would ever truly listen? To help? Maybe you're just not looking close enough. Pearl High School is one of the four hundred subscribers to AnComm, a way for students to anonymously communicate with counselors and administrators at the high school.

Pearl High started using AnComm approximately four years ago, as "a way for students to break the ice and get their concerns heard" as Mrs. Tiffany Durr, counselor, put it. The first year PHS had AnComm, counselors and administrators received quite a few inquiries from students; however, lately, not very many. Counselors Mrs. Becky Rowan and Mrs. Durr, both agree students should hear more about AnComm.

Many students have taken their time during the rush of changing classes to notice and read AnComm's "Talk About it" poster. "Talk about it" is the nation's first and only anonymous online and text based reporting and emergency notification service.

"The counselors have done more individual counseling this year than they have done in years past. It does take time on the counselors' part, but AnComm is another outlet by which kids can communicate. That makes it a positive," posted Ray Morgigno on AnComm's website.

Stress, bullying, and depression ranked in the top three highest-known incidents as reported by elementary, middle and high schools.

The number of incidents involving stress is higher in students than most. Bullying is another problem at most schools. Unfortunately there are few antidotes for dealing with stress, however bullying is something one could try putting a stop to.

Almost 77% of students have been bullied, verbally, mentally, and physically. School Nurse, Mrs. Bonnie DeSalvo states "If you witness bullying, you should definitely say its wrong, stand up, and immediately notify an administrator. Bullying is not a good behavior and should not be tolerated. We as a group should let it be known it's bad. Everyone should step forward in this case."

Depression is a main cause for suicide. Most people look down on depression as just another student trying to get attention. But depression is a serious condition. A person with depression has uncontrollable mood swings in which they feel all the bad emotions (sadness, anxiety, emptiness, hopelessness, worthlessness, etc.) and none of the good.

According to AnComm's website, suicide is the third leading cause of death for 15-24 year olds, and the sixth leading cause of death for 5-14 year olds. "That's ridiculous. That should be stopped. That blows my mind. How bad can a five year olds life be for that to happen. That's horrible," said Junior Kendall Coleman.
